

ABSTRACT

A medicine receptacle label apparatus and method is proposed. The labeling system includes the placement of an iconic label upon the exterior of a medicine receptacle to graphically assist the patient in taking the proper medication. The iconic labels include descriptive icons that graphically depict either the symptoms or desired result for which the medicine contained therein is to be taken, among others. The present invention will assist the elderly and vision impaired the most, enabling them to select and consume their medications properly.